Best Cough Medicine

IN THE WORLD.

From one of the oldest and best Houses in Massachusetts.

MESSRS. GEORGE HOWE & CO.

GENTLEMEN:—Since 1812, I have been a dealer in Medicines, and have sold many kinds of Cough Medicines, but I have never found any that gave such universal satisfaction as your Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It has always proved itself worthy of confidence, and has never disappointed me in a single instance. I have sold it to Physicians, Public Institutions, Families, Sea Captains, and Individuals, and have never heard a complaint. Many have told me that they have used it for years, and would use no other. Others have said that it has cured them when all other remedies failed. Many have told me that it has cured their children of Whooping Cough, when they thought they must die. Others have said that it has cured them of Consumption, when they had given up all hope, and were fast sinking into the grave. Such information gives me pleasure, and I take this method of making it known to you, that you may use it as you please.

Yours truly, SAMUEL D. TOWNSEND.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

Our recent reference to General Selden Connor, of Augusta, as the most prominent of the gentlemen whose names have been publicly mentioned in connection with the next Republican gubernatorial candidacy, and as one who would most worthily fill the position, has met with a prompt and gratifying response in other sections of the State. The Portland Press, while disclaiming at present the active partisanship of any individual, warmly eulogizes the record, character and qualifications of General Connor, and says that active and earnest Republicans in various parts of the State express the hope that he may be our next standard-bearer. The Press gives a handsome biographical sketch of the subject of its article, and sets forth those qualities of modesty united with dignity and independence which are calculated to inspire the popular regard. One of its most truthful remarks is that General Connor has not sought the office or importuned for support, and the complimentary reception of his name is the more gratifying and significant on that account. The Kennebec Journal complimentously quotes our editorial remarks on the subject, and the Bath Times promptly speaks up for Sagadahoc as follows:

"The BANGOR WHIG noticed the retirement of Governor Dingley in complimentary terms, and suggested a suitable candidate for his successor the name of General Selden Connor. We most heartily second that motion."

In view of the important bearings of our elections to come the Republicans should unite upon the candidate who, while fully qualified for the office, will most fully command the popular support, and the indications of harmonious action to this end are most assuring. We can say for the Republicans of this section that their first desire is to have the right man in the right place, and that no personal or local considerations will prevent their hearty co-operation with our brethren throughout the State in selecting a candidate who shall best represent the preferences and command the strongest support of the people. Let us make this campaign without Democratic meddling or unnecessary contentions within our own ranks—unite on the best man for Governor and elect him by an old-fashioned Maine Republican majority.

THE NEW JUDGESHIP

The telegraph has already announced the nomination by Governor Dingley of Hon. Artemas Libby, of Augusta, for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed our distinguished fellow-citizen, Hon. Jonas Cutting, who is about to retire from that position as fully laden with honors as with years. In ignoring partisan considerations in making this appointment, Governor Dingley not only signalizes his closing administration with an act of graceful courtesy toward what has been the political opposition in this State for many years, but he has also given expression to the liberal sentiment of the Republicans of the State with reference to this judicial office. We know that there has been a very general desire on the part of our political friends that this appointment should be tendered to a Democrat, other things being equal, and we believe that the nomination of Mr. Libby will prove very acceptable throughout the State. He is one of the foremost members of the Maine Bar, and will bring to his new duties a clear intellect, thorough legal training and wide experience of practice in the higher courts. We presume that his nomination will be promptly confirmed, and trust that he may prove a worthy successor to the honored Judge who is about to carry with him in his retirement from public labors the warmest testimonials of the esteem of the people whom he has so long and faithfully served.

We copy below from the Lewiston Journal a summary of the appropriate remarks of Governor Dingley to the Council in presenting the nomination:

In making this nomination, the Governor said to members of the Council that he had given the subject a careful and prolonged consideration, and had availed himself of the opinions of such eminent gentlemen as are particularly qualified to speak in a matter of this character. With no other purpose than to best subserve the public interests, he had found himself unable to reach any other conclusion than that the appointment to the Supreme Bench of a gentleman from the Democratic party, as well qualified for the position as any other citizen that can be obtained, would, in view of the fact that the other Justices are known to be in sympathy with the Republican party, prove of great advantage to the highest court of the State, in that it would tend to satisfy even partisan minds that the controlling political organization in Maine desires to avoid even the appearance of partisanship in judicial tribunals set for the protection of the rights of every citizen.

The Governor said it must be evident to every thoughtful citizen that there should be a marked distinction made between judicial and ordinary political offices. In the latter class of offices, men's opinions on political questions have more or less to do with the manner in which they will discharge the duties. Their functions are to a large extent representative, and it is to be expected that the voters of the appointing power will generally seek for such official positions men who agree with them on political issues. But it is the duty of a judge not to represent the political opinions of majorities or minorities, but to interpret constitutional and laws according to established legal principles, without fear or favor. To this end the political views of judges are of little consequence; the great point is to secure gentlemen of the highest integrity, ability, legal attainments and judicial cast of mind.

The Governor thought it wise and essential to have the Supreme Court so constituted as to embrace members from both political parties. Unless this be the case, he thought there is danger that sooner or later distrust will arise in the minds of some citizens on partisan grounds. Thus far the high character of the members of the Court, and the comparatively short period since the Court has been composed of members of the same political faith, have prevented partisan distrust from gaining ground; but we can hardly expect to much longer avoid it without taking care that men are placed on the bench from both political parties. The importance of this fact has been recognized in nearly every State in the Union, and all appearance even of partisanship avoided by such a course. By setting such an example at the present time in this State, he considered it probable that all danger in this direction would be avoided hereafter in the event of political changes in the State administration, and the court would be recognized as the one tribunal elevated above the possibility of partisanship.

Our report elsewhere shows that Sheriff Jerrard and his aids made it lively for the rumsellers yesterday, and the number of seizures made would indicate that the work has commenced none too soon. The victims will probably find that the election of a Democratic Mayor does not guarantee immunity to their detestable traffic, and the Sheriff will be heartily sustained by all the better classes of our people in administering a signal check to that defiance of the law which was daily becoming more bold.

THE THIRD TERM AGAIN.

[From the Providence Journal.]

The bugbear of a third term is again a matter of discussion in Republican newspapers. There is no reason whatever for believing that the President has ever had in his mind any purpose of again becoming a candidate for the high office which he holds. He has given no intimation of the kind to any of his friends, or to any person who claims to be authorized to speak for him. Indeed he is reported to have referred to the rumors which have been put in circulation, only to characterize them as too idle to require any contradiction or notice from him. Certain newspapers, however, have used their utmost endeavors to create the impression that he intends to be a candidate for a third term; if the party can be induced to nominate him. And to a very considerable extent they have succeeded in fastening this impression upon the public mind. It is now the opinion of many of our most sagacious politicians and party leaders, that the Republican cause has suffered severely in consequence. This opinion has been expressed very decidedly by Mr. Thurlow Weed and Vice-President Wilson, as well as many others, and it prevails quite generally throughout the country.

In these circumstances very many will agree with those who maintain that the President owes it to the party which has given him its generous support for two terms, to declare that on no consideration whatever will he be a candidate for a third time. It will relieve the public mind from all possible cause of doubt or misgiving on the subject, and it will immediately put to rest the imputations and suspicions which his enemies are continually scattering among the people of the country. The suggestion of a third term for any President is and must always be an unpopular one. It is contrary to the precedent established and sanctioned by all our Presidents, and this has now become scarcely less sacred than the Constitution itself. It would be neither wise nor safe for any party to attempt to set it aside, and this is certainly what the Republican party has never thought of doing. The only question from the beginning has been whether it was worth while to make any declaration at all on this subject. One reason why so little notice has been taken of the matter in Republican conventions is a very natural unwillingness to allow their action to be dictated by their opponents. They did not feel called upon to deny and repel what they knew to be merely a Democratic imputation. Mingled with this feeling, no doubt, there was a slight apprehension that to make a positive declaration on the subject might be represented in some quarters as an expression of something like disapproval of the President or of his administration. The consequence is that nothing has been said or done by the Republican party, as such, to deny the allegations of its opponents and the opponents of the President, as to his becoming a candidate for a third term.

Whatever disadvantages may have been experienced from these declarations going uncontradicted, it is now in the power of the President to dethem all away, by an explicit avowal of his own determination on the question. We are fully aware that it may seem unbecoming the station of a President of the United States to decline to be a candidate for the office again until he is asked. Nor are we unmindful of the fact that any declaration of the sort which he may now make will be held up to criticism by the Democrats as one to which he has been forced by the clamors of an adverse public opinion. But the circumstances are peculiar. The condition of the country must be taken into account. There can be no question, we think, that such an avowal on the part of the President would greatly promote the interests of the Republican party. Those interests ought to have great weight with him. He may well regard them as superior to all personal considerations. To strengthen the party and to insure its success at the next election is an object of the very greatest importance, for the promotion of which the President and all others of its members, is bound to use every fair and honorable means.

THE LUXURIES AND ODDITIES OF OUR FOREIGN TRADE.

[From the Boston Journal.]

The statistics of our foreign trade for the year ending June 30, 1871, contain a great deal that is or ought to be of interest to those who foot the bills. The total value of the imports that year on which duty was paid—a very important distinction to be kept in mind in these days of general smuggling—was in round numbers about $600,000,000 (the official figure being $595,861,248), and the duty paid thereon was $160,522,285. It is estimated that the cost to consumers, to cover charges of freight, insurance and other necessary expenses, including the profits of dealers, must have reached over $945,135,000, a sum nearly equal to one-half of the entire national debt. One cannot but ponder therefore, whether, and to what extent, all this outlay was really required by the interests of the American people. To assist the inquiry we copy a few of the items for which good money goes out of American pockets.

Our heads have a great commercial value, for it appears that they required for covering and adornment during the year under consideration, foreign articles to the amount of $8,633,013. Of these hats, bonnets and hoods—the substantial thing, as such things go—took $1,574,800, on which the duty was over half a million of dollars, while the feathers and artificial flowers ran up $3,315,036. Thus, the ornamental more than doubled the cost of the useful; and this sort of fact strikes us very often in reviewing our list of importations. While we are on the question of head-gear, however, we might as well add that human hair and its manufactures, such as wigs, curls and ringlets, were imported to the value of $1,117,545. "Our hands called for gloves, mits and mittens of nearly five millions worth, that is, $4,872,068, without reckoning fans to the amount of $464,430, or handkerchiefs worth $303,172, or the heavy sum of $1,510,836 for pocket knives. The feet needed, or at least took, hosiery valued at $7,247,347. Our importation of goods of all kinds amounted to $39,[illegible] 096,035; of woolens, $35,372,704; of cotton goods, duties included, $11,397,[illegible] 189.

Our foreign made carpets cost us—when they were landed merely, like the preceding goods, and not when they reached the consumer—$6,172,582.

The curiosities of our foreign trade are too many to particularize. Our ribbons from abroad cost more than our carpets—over six and a half millions—for which the Government was wise enough to take a toll of $2,321,000. The cost of our diamonds and other precious stones was $2,[illegible] 837,539. Musical instruments cost us $1,[illegible] 133,814; doll babies, $555,409; Christmas toys, $618,067; corsets, $1,256,508; cheese, $634,466; vaccine virus, $890,909; eggs, $742,960; green fruits and tropical nuts, $4,300,350. In another class of commodities the figures are a great deal larger, to wit: For imported wines and spirits we paid $16,852,186, and for tobacco and manufactures of tobacco, $14,521,810. Of the absolute necessity or practical value of any nine-tenths of this class of imports, there will be no disagreement among thoughtful men. The proper place, however, for drawing the line between desirable or useful, and the objectionable or harmful foreign goods is not easy to determine.

The Tribune of Wednesday says: "The long-expected crisis of the great trial has come. Mr. Beecher is in the hands of the cross-examiner. Thus far Mr. Fullerton has made little headway in the efforts to entangle or confuse him; but to-day's examination is expected to be lively."

THE OLDTOWN CRUSADE

THE ANNIVERSARY MEETING

On Monday night, April 12th, the members of the Ladies' Crusade of Oldtown, celebrated their first anniversary in the Town Hall, the President, Mrs. M. L. Hoskins, occupying the chair. The members of the Crusade sat upon the right of the platform, the Reform Club upon the left. The exercises commenced at half-past seven, with the singing of "Hebron" by the choir, Rev Mr. Preston made the opening prayer, which was followed by a few remarks from Mrs. Hoskins, in which, after referring to some of the past experience of the Crusade, she said

"I have never doubted for a moment that good would result from our labors, whether our own or other hands should bear home the sheaves." In a few earnest words to the Crusade, she urged them never in their lives to be false to their present position, to their high convictions, and to the God that has blessed them. Speaking to the brothers of the Reform Club, she begged them never to go back from the ground they have conquered, but go on to greater victory.

The report of the year's work was then called for, which was read by the Secretary, Mrs. J. A Lord. This was followed by singing by the choir, "Rest for the Weary."

Mrs. M. C. Williams Vice President was called upon, which she responded in a very happy manner. Speaking of the difference in public opinion in regard to the temperance question now, and thirty years ago, she said "My faith never reached to this night. One year ago I pledged myself with five or six others, to try and keep up the interest, and said if it died, I meant to be with it to the last."

The President of the Reform Club, Thomas Jordan, arose amid deafening cheers, and said "I know I will never go back, and believe the same of my Club." After referring to the recent precautions, he asked the question if any one could tell the difference between a high and a low rumseller? He said all the difference he could see was, one commences the work of destruction, and the other finishes it. The last year and a half had been the happiest of his life. He thanked God that he had left off the use of liquor in time to save his soul, and urged upon young men the necessity of coming over to the side of temperance before it is too late.

Mrs. M Mitchell was called, and said: "I joined the Crusade a year ago, not thinking I could do any good save in my own family, but I now feel amply repaid for the year's work.

Mr. Brayden, of the Reform Club, and Mrs. R. Barker, of the Crusade, both made some very excellent remarks, followed by singing by the choir, "Work."

Dr. J. B. Elkins, of the Club was then called on he arose and said "It is an old one to address an audience on any at this is a world of change. A ago, you would little thought on me in this place on the subject once. I wish to say a word to a hem I see in the audience, who addicted to the habit of drinkwith us, our society is the best cieties to work. Each cannot sermon to the other, for where on in the road, the other has a rule. Come with us, and help others.

ey made some very interesting n the course of which he alluded scouragements, opposition and that the Ladies' Crusade had cuse, also the change in public opinto good that has resulted from rs.

Brayton, of the Club, felt it his knowledge to good done to him, d to thank the ladies for the hahe last seven months. Luther e of the youngest members of was next called, and made some emarks. He said he felt like a carried down with the current, ands had been reached out to to the whole.

ios Smith said she was a Crusaear, was one this year, and should xt year, if she should live; and emale friends to be faithful and l."

Soper, of the Club, said, "I am e a temperate man. The quesor no rum. Each person could ano side. I am no rum."

Preston made the closing re- commenced by telling a story ant, and compared the women sage to him, inasmuch as they orn set. He said it is no time to lority and minority, that at all are a faithful few to do the rum will put the nation out of unless we as a nation, can put it thanked God that Oldtown, all other places are becoming again, and hoped the ladies ion on both sides of the platl go ahead.

ing was closed by singing the and all seemed well satisfied ermises.

CONSUMPTIVES, TAKE NOTICE.

Every moment of delay makes your cure more hopeless, and much depends on the judicious choice of a remedy. The amount of testimony in favor of Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, as a cure for consumption, far exceeds all that can be brought to support the pretensions of any other medicine. Dr. Schenck, of Almount, containing the certificates of many persons of the highest respectability, who have been restored to health, after having pronounced incurable by physicians of high standing. Dr. Schenck's Seaweed Tonic, alone has cured many, as these evidences will show, but the cure is often promoted by the employment of the other remedies which Dr. Schenck prescribes. Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills. By the timely use of these medicines, according to directions, Dr. Schenck certifies that most cases of consumption may be cured.

Dr. Schenck will be at the Quincy House, Boston, on the 3d Monday, from 9 to 3 o'clock. Call in person or write. Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Seaweed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, are for sale by druggists generally. Price of each, $1.50. THE BROOKLYN TRIAL.

MR. FULLERTON TAKEN ILL.

The Court Adjourns to Monday.

The Scene at the Opening Thursday

BROOKLYN, April 15 Mr. Beecher, his wife and daughter came into court at five minutes to 11, Deacon Caldwell with difficulty making way for them through the closely-crowded aisles The great preacher appears to bear the ordeal well and he was able to smile pleasantly and hold humorous conversation with General Tracy Tilton, on the contrary, looked very pale and jaded, but seemed to be in better spirits than usual, as if satisfied with the course events were taking All the counsel were present and many of them introduced friends so that there was scarcely room for reporters and officers to pass through During the interval while the court was waiting for Mr Fullerton's arrival, Mr Beecher chattered round to the table where some Brooklyn reporters were in charge of desert ing his appearance and held a chat with them Then he wheeled around and surveyed the audience and finally mounted to the witness chair and for a while swayed the time struck up conversation with the official stenographers

Mr Beach Announces Fullerton's Illness

Mr Beach addressing the Court said Your Honor I am very much pained to announce that Mr Fullerton is not well enough to proceed with the further cross examination of Mr Beecher to-day He is subject as your Honor is aware, to attacks of vertigo, and has suffered from it during this trial, but has forced himself to do his duty He is now in the anteroom and he feels he would only risk a dangerous catastrophe if he should proceed I mentioned the matter to the other side and they coincided with the most cordial assent to the proposition to adjourn either until to-morrow or until Monday as we do not like the end of the week (as your Honor shall decide) But I would gladly proceed now if with the further examination and endeavor to close it without his presence but for two reasons which dictate me In the first place I have in a separate article given an examination of Mr Fullerton's minutes and in the second place I do not feel myself quite as capable of performing the duty

Mr. Evarts' Remarks

Mr Evarts said It is with unfeigned sorrow in our profession and by the bench that a lawyer is under every motive to carry his exertions to the extreme of laborious expenditure and I have no doubt Mr Fullerton has that disposition but we, on our side cannot be insensible to the fact that a lawyer who finds himself in danger in the progress of a cause and exposed to it, does not divide the case or the prospects of getting through with it if he proceeds under these circumstances We think on our side that Mr Fullerton and his associates should regard the condition of his health and consult that consideration In the matter of an adjournment

Judge Neilson then announced that the court would adjourn until Monday morning next and the throng of spectators dispersed

Bessie Turner was in court to-day and after adjournment was greeted very warmly by Mr Beecher

APRIL SKIES

BY REBECCA H. PIERCE

I

O skies inconstant! April skies
Which want so oft a changeful guise
Of sunny smiles and many a frown,
And tears which fall so softly down!
Will, in my brief and passing thought
Be ever by your vagaries wrought
Like many a human heart you be
In all your fickle moods to me?

II

Yet mid my fickle April sky
Of one who oft doth pass me by
A forest so delicious and fair
As spring's first flowers that scent the air
Like blooms of May her sweet young face
Where rests, oft a pedalic grace
And dark and tender are her eyes
As blue as June's or cloudless skies

But, though so wondrous fair to see
Fickle as beautiful is she
For in her snowy bosom lies
A heart, false as the changeful skies!

COOKING EGGS

BY MRS. S. H. MANAHOD

I most cheerfully accede to the request of T. M. B. to afford a little light to the matter of cooking the eggs since I love to treat of subjects connected with our daily bread, and should gladly spend a fortnight or more if necessary in order to properly suppose.

In the first place it may be stated that it is well established principle that [illegible] albumen—of which the white of the egg and the extractive part of the yolk is composed—is not only a nutritious, but easily digestible food, if digested by cooking or hard [illegible]

[illegible] the eggs [illegible] very [illegible] ing, [illegible] ses of digestion [illegible] albumen of the egg, the oyster and sausage [illegible] are already rendered [illegible] digestion by cooking, the latter [illegible] hydrolyzed or [illegible] forces of the mouth [illegible] When the egg is [illegible] shelled all must be [illegible] the white—which [illegible] is certainly cooked the hardest—is tough and can not be mash d like the yolk, [illegible] rely as the latter of the albumen [illegible] article does [illegible] to our good [illegible] in the permeation and dissolution [illegible] them.

Allow me also to say that I have consulted standard authorities and find no objection [illegible] to this position in respect [illegible] the favorite [illegible] although [illegible] or [illegible] highly [illegible] of [illegible] tion but when boiled hard or [illegible] the fact is digestibility is certainly impaired.

Again, by the [illegible] of testing the digestibility of the [illegible] boiled [illegible] as soon [illegible] may be easily [illegible] water [illegible] will obtain [illegible] of the [illegible] the stomach [illegible] of calf (rennet) [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
